For the past fifteen years, Drew has brought his teaching and performances to the unlikeliest of places and to a diversity of populations, making him ideal for tailoring a residency to communities large and small and for making the arts accessible, practical, and fun.

Reading, Writing, and Juggling

A combination of circus skills, reading, and writing exercises that connect movement to the written word. This arts literacy program was originally developed for Chicago at-risk youths in an after-school program. Ages 7-13.

Circus Skills

Learn to juggle, balance, and perform. Ages 8-108.

Make a Silent Movie

Drew and a group of 6-12 students will produce a short silent movie in one week. Students will get an overview of digital filmmaking while writing, acting, and editing. The finished movie will be shown as part of Drew's public show, and the workshop participants will each get a DVD copy. Junior high through college.

The Art of Foolery

A lecture/demonstration about where Drew gets ideas, the history of foolery, and how foolery can be an art. This educational and entertaining presentation features excerpts from Drew's shows, screenings of his silent movies, and a question and answer period. All ages.

Think Like a Fool: Creativity in Life and Art

Learn how to come up with creative ideas to solve problems or just to express yourself. Look at the world upside-down and see things you've never seen before. Can be tailored for businesses, high schools, colleges, and specific groups (such as a writers' group).

Dramatic Foolery

Community theatre groups, high school drama clubs, university acting classes, and professional performers can all benefit from this foolish and physical approach to acting. They will learn how to make comedic acting more truthful and serious acting more expressive.

Drew the Town Fool

A community performance where Drew becomes the official town fool for the day, entertaining on the street and wherever else permission is obtained. A great way to publicize the show and add some needed humor to everyday life.
